

TURNING YOUR FAMILY HISTORY INTO A LIVELY NARRATIVE

You would not be alone if, after years of research, you found yourself drowning in papers – census forms, birth certificates, marriage certificates, death certificates, wills, letters, newspaper cuttings – and wondering how on earth you were going to turn all these facts and figures into a lively story about your ancestors. Help is at hand!

Rebecca de Saintonge is not only an experienced writer, a former BBC journalist and biographer, she is also a social historian and has considerable experience picking through mountains of data to find the human story buried beneath.

If you were unable to attend her workshop at the WHO DO YOU THINK YOU ARE LIVE? exhibition this year – or if you did, and want more information about how she might be able to help you put the pieces of your research together – you can either ring her on 01892 512323 or email LifeLines Press www.lifelinespress.co.uk

She can also be reached at her personal website www.rebeccadesaintonge.co.uk